Dear Mr. Cosby:

It might be true that eyes are the windows to one's soul, but to get to my eyes, first you'll have to pass through my lenses, shutter and film. Photography is my passion, and it is the reason I am interested in your photojournalist internship.

I held my first camera in fourth grade, and I've taught myself about photography ever since. I'm a curious person who likes to question the conventions in life. Combined with my thirst for creativity and commitment to hard work, these traits helped me capture some interesting photos, but I believe there is always room for me to grow and learn.

I also have a desire to connect with people. I don't want to get into their lives. I want to get into their minds. My camera is their eyes. My photographs are their stories. My vision is their vision.

In order to accurately show this vision, I plan to improve my technical skills with college classes, but the Daily Bugle would be a perfect place for me to grow in my art while gaining experience.

Thank you for your time and for considering my application for the Daily Bugle photojournalist internship. Feel free to contact me with any questions or concerns. I look forward to working with you in the future, and hope I will be able to join your team as a creative contributor.

Sincerely,

John Peter Zenger
